

The story of Furgeson

Meet Furgeson, the now roughly 15 weeks old Bengal kitten! Furgeson's owner had bought services for Furgeson to be neutered and vaccinated at one of our clinics in April 2026 where his kitten vaccine series had begun for feline distemper. He has thus far been one of our youngest patients to be neutered at the age of 9 weeks and started his feline distemper vaccines. The owner has been very diligent in returning with Furgeson every few weeks to update his feline distemper shots to keep him healthy and we are happy to report that he will be returning for his final kitten booster! He will be the first patient we've serviced that has finished the full kitten booster series and we are very proud of him and all the patients we've serviced who have returned for all their boosters!!

Congratulations Furgeson!

Kittens typically need to start their boosters as early as either 4-6 weeks old and continue returning to get their feline distemper shots every 3-6 weeks until they are 14-20 weeks old where they finally get their annual vaccine. Rabies gets done at the same time as their final feline distemper typically

This is all to ensure contagious processes like panleukopenia (feline parvo), calicivirus, and rhinotracheitis is not given to them and they don't give it to others. This type of vaccine is recommended for all cats especially those who go outside, encounter other cats, those who travel with them, or those who take them to a facility to be groomed or boarded
